I am planning on declaring as a Marketing and Management double major with a minor in construction management. I have gained some experience in construction and operating heavy equipment in the last two years while I worked at Beale Air Force Base, CA and Tooele Army Depot, UT. Working on these military bases is an amazing thing to experience for many reasons. One of them being that you get to see things that ordinary people don't. With the enjoyment I've had over the past two years and what I am expecting for this year too, it makes me think that I'd like to work with a company that is involved with the military in some way. I've heard a little bit about some companies that make specific parts for military vehicles, and that sounds super interesting to me.

I have had my own computer for many years now that I love to use for everything from schoolwork to entertainment. Because I've had it for so long and I have done work on it myself by upgrading and adding parts, I have a pretty good understanding of the parts and functions involved with it. I use many kinds of software on my computer, including most standard Microsoft applications (Word, Excel, Outlook, PowerPoint), search browsers, launchers, and video editing software. I've used these Microsoft apps since I was a little kid and grew up using them for all sorts of reasons in school and work. The browser helps me do lots of basic tasks like schoolwork, shopping, or watching videos; The launchers are used for finding games to play with my friends, and I occasionally use the video editing software to put little ski videos together for fun.

I was born and raised here in Reno, and I lived 15 minutes away from Mount Rose almost all my life. I love the mountains and desert here in northern Nevada so that's a big reason why I chose UNR. My hobbies also revolve around the terrain available in this area because I love skiing and dirt biking. My dad had me on skis when I was three years old and I was active on them until I was about 8 or 9. During my early teens, I got really into dirt biking, and I would race local motocross events and would even travel several hours to attend the ones that were further away. When I finally got my driver's license, I was convinced by my buddies in high school to start skiing again and since then I've put up an average of about 70 days each season for the last 4 seasons. Recently I have started getting into backcountry skiing where you "skin" up the mountains (basically hiking), to find good snow that the resorts don't have to offer several days after it storms, so I am desperately waiting for it to snow again in Tahoe because touring is so rewarding and fun. I like hip-hop and classic rock as my two favorite genres, and I listen to many different artists in those. My favorite movie series is the Maze Runner series because I find dystopian societies very intriguing. I am currently enjoying the college experience as much as possible, but I am very excited for the future and being able to care for my family one day.
